Office of Political Practice: Political Sign Attribution Requirements When it comes to political signs, the COPP has jurisdiction only in upholding and enforcing attribution requirements. In other words, the only oversight over political signs that the COPP has is in ensuring the required "paid for by" attribution message is included, and that the expense is disclosed fully in a campaign finance report. The COPP does not have oversight over when citizens may begin to display political signs or when those signs must be taken down. More guidance on the "paid for by" attribution requirements is available on the COPP's website at <http://politicalpractices.mt.gov/Education-and-Resources/Attribution-Information>. See Mont. Code Ann 13-25-225 and 44.11.601(2) ARM for the full attribution requirements and applicability.
